Some of the coroners' verdicts in the

some of the causes assigned for death:

body of John Brown lying dead by the jurors whose names are hereto subscribe, upon whom their oaths do say that he came to his death in the following manner, by falling off the plank bridge accidental while trying to cross the stream and was drowned."

"Bald child, aged one day old, came to her death from spasms, said child having been found by the witness in a trunk, under very suspicious circumstances."

"The losses on there cattle do say that he came to his death by old age, as he could not see anything else the matter."

"Come to his death from the following cause, to wit: from some additional cause to the Juarez unknown."

"The said deceased being an orphan, father and mother being both dead."

REVOLUTION IN WARFARE

A New Era Marked by the South African Warfare.

It is slowly beginning to dawn upon

England and upon Europe at large that the struggle in South Africa is making a revolution in the methods of military warfare no less radical than that which the Monitor-Merrimac fight signified a generation ago in naval warfare. A new military truism has been evolved from the terrible experiences of those British armies during the past three months, namely, that an entrenched force equipped with modern small arms is invincible against any frontal attack made in the open. When this proposition was first made on behalf of the armies of Bulwer, Gaia and Methuen, it was received more as a charitable actue from apologists for British disasters than as a genuine military discovery.

There is no doubt that British generaals, nearly all of them, have been guilty of grave tactical blunders, but there is no doubt also that the science of war has changed. It is a change, moreover, which militates against the favorite methods of British campaigning, more than against those of any other country. It is a change which robs war of half its martial glory, a change which minimizes valor and substitutes the cool, silent brainwork of a good chess player for the charge of a light brigade. It is not a wise man's change for officer or man in this country. It does not reduce the hardships of war; it increases its drudgery and toil, and almost eliminates its excitement and opportunity for personal distinction.

In a word, it will make war and military life unpopular for the rank and file.

The ultimate effect will probably be a distinct decline in the martial spirit which is the indispensable mainstay of all armies. The birth of this new martial era is now chronicled in the letters coming from the front which are based upon sound military judgment. The event is recorded in every instance with evident disappointment, for the writers do not conceal their regret that war has been stripped of its individual and collective heroism. But the lesson has been forced home in deadly fashion.

A modern regiment equipped with rapid fire and long range guns could vanquish the armies of Xerxes. It could defeat the armies of Jena, Austerlitz, or Waterloo. The Oregon could sink all the ships engaged at Trafalgar, in the Nile or elsewhere,

Developmental processes are constantly at work. To say men have not improved is a foolish and futile statement.

Political wiseacres are saying now that Roosevelt will be the head of the Republican ticket in 1904 and that Hill will be the head of the Democratic ticket the same year. Four years is a long time to wait, though Bryan seems not to think so.

The Louisville Dispatch as well as the Post seems to have it in for M.

C. These papers will "bluff" him with or without provocation.

The golding Democrat is just now a "lawyer of wood."
